Now, with the addition of submodule commands (interfaces), volume commands live in the main module source while submodule related commands have a separate source. It would be nice to funnel submodule commands through a separate volume class as submodules are essentially subdirs in a volume (filesystem). This would also be beneficial for implementing enhancements such as volume connection pool, asynchronous subvolume deletes and auto-spawn MDS on volume creation.